

The Battle of Neighbourhoods (Part 1)

Introduction

Toronto is itself a cultural phenomenon, with residents from around the world and scores of languages, foods, customs and cultures. Toronto is the largest city in Canada and the 4th largest city in North America, with a population of 6.2 Million people as of 2020 (a 0.94% increase from 2019). The total population in Greater Toronto Area and the outskirts is 9.25 Million, meaning that Greater Toronto Area makes up 67% of the total population of the area, with the city growing at an ever-increasing rate. Around 48% of Toronto's population is made up of those who are of an ethnic minority, with those of Chinese ethnicity making up the majority coming in at 12%.

Toronto's diversity means that it is the ideal destination for Asians trying to find a new place to move to. Many different languages are spoken throughout Toronto, with English being the predominant language with 51% listing it as their first language, however both Chinese and Cantonese follow with approximately 6% of the population speaking either one. Out of the 12.5% of the population that are Chinese, 47% of them Reside the district In Scarborough—Agincourt.

Problems:

1. List the top 100 Chinese Restaurants in Toronto and plot it on a map.
2. What neighbourhood has the best Chinese Restaurant options?
3. Are Chinese Restaurants located in areas with high Chinese population.
